Summary report

Prescription writing(ADC-2104)

The five-day Prescription Writing Course, led by Dr. Somnath Motagi, Professor and Head of Pharmacology, along with Dr Jamuna Rani ,Professor of Pharmacology, and Rohit Singh Thakur, Associate Professor of General Medicine, provided comprehensive training for medical students. The course began with an introduction to prescription components, legal and ethical considerations, and the fundamentals of pharmacology. Students engaged in hands-on practice and case-based scenarios to hone their prescription writing skills. The second day focused on evidence-based prescribing and drug selection for common conditions, guided by clinical scenarios. Effective patient communication and education strategies were emphasized on the third day, with special attention to paediatric and geriatric prescribing. Safety and monitoring were the themes of the fourth day, including the management of adverse drug reactions and the importance of follow-up. The final day underscored the importance of interprofessional collaboration, with a comprehensive review, case studies, and final assessments. Throughout the course, students benefited from interactive sessions, role-playing, and practical exercises, culminating in a thorough understanding of safe and effective prescription practices.

The Program was conducted on 25.10.21- 29.10.21at Lecture Hall, Ground Floor, Academic Block, MRIMS, Hyderabad for 50 students of II MBBS and for 30 hours.
