Summary Report

ADC-2105: Adolescent Health

Adolescent health is a critical area of focus for medical graduates, as this demographic faces unique health challenges that require specialized knowledge and skills. Preparedness in adolescent health ensures that medical professionals can address the physical, mental, and social health needs of adolescents effectively. Understanding adolescent health enables medical professionals to promote healthy behaviors, provide appropriate care, and support the well-being of young people.

Preparedness training in adolescent health includes strategies for managing common health issues such as substance abuse, mental health disorders, sexual and reproductive health, and chronic diseases. It also emphasizes the importance of preventive care and health education, equipping medical professionals to engage with adolescents and their families to foster healthier lifestyles.

Effective communication is a cornerstone of adolescent health care. Preparedness training helps medical graduates develop the skills to communicate clearly and empathetically with adolescents, ensuring they feel heard and understood. This is crucial for building trust and encouraging compliance with medical advice.

Moreover, preparedness training in adolescent health helps medical graduates develop resilience and adaptability, enabling them to manage the dynamic and often complex nature of adolescent health issues. It fosters a holistic approach, integrating physical, emotional, and social aspects of care, and promotes interdisciplinary collaboration to provide comprehensive support for adolescents.

The Key resource person for this course was Dr Ravi Babu, Professor in the Department of Community Medicine at MRIMS, with support from Dr. Vaseem, associate professor and Dr. Vandana, Assistant Professors in the same department, the course provided a comprehensive overview of planning and execution

The Program was conducted on 16.11.2021 to 20.11.2021 at Lecture Hall, Ground Floor, Academic Block, MRIMS, Hyderabad for III MBBS students(2019 Batch) for 30 hours
